DEER POPULATION

The Hudson Oaks community offers a semi-rural residential environment that brings urban wildlife, people, and domestic pets close together. While it can be alluring and entertaining, the interactions between these three groups can pose hazards, including public safety concerns for the community.

Of particular concern in Hudson Oaks is the overabundant deer population. More frequent interactions between people and deer are leading to, among other problems: (1) threat of disease, (2) traffic accidents, (3) costly property damage, and (4) health issues for the deer population.

According to the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department, "the prohibition of feeding deer is critical to solving [the problem of] overabundance." Therefore, the City Council adopted a resolution in November 2012. The resolution asks people in Hudson Oaks to stop feeding all wildlife.
